Grow:

to spring up and develop to maturity

Starting kindergarten was much easier than starting college. Someone told you what to wear, what to eat, and how to behave. But now, suddenly, you're on your own. A refreshing change, but scary too. Many students were away from home for the first time as the 2001 fall semester began, living on their own, paying their own bills, making their own decisions about going to class, doing homework, or going to bed. Some made good decisions, others did not, but that's all apart of growing up.

Growing Pains: stress, strains of attending a new project

Many at ASU learned what the term “growing pains” meant during the 2001-2002 school year. Many remained cramped in the old Carl R. Reng Center as work began on the new Reng Student Services Center and parking spaces were hard to come by as work continued on the new parking deck. While the whole city adjusted to the permanent closing of Aggie Road which ran through the center of campus, chain-link fences covered with green netting went up around the area to protect students from the construction.

Growth:

something that grows or has grown

As Arkansas State grew, the city of Jonesboro experienced continued growth as well. New restaurants, stores, and businesses steadily moved into the area. Housing also grew with new apartments and homes being built across the city. In 2001, Jonesboro saw more than five new restaurants open, including chains such as Ruby Tuesday, O'Charlies and Outback Steak House. Pier 1 Imports, T.J. Max and Old Navy gave students new places to shop. Plans for a new mall were also underway.

Student Life

Students thrived on the ASU campus during the 2001-2002 school year. Organizations such as the Student Government Association taught students how to be active citizens, religious organizations helped students define their beliefs, and intermurals taught players camaraderie and competition. As students faced rising tuition they had to work to pay their bills while still participating in extra curricular activities like theatre, band and cheerleading.

Flames flicker in the darkness as hundreds of people join together to show their unity and support for the nation. The vigil was held in place of the annual Order of the Tribe which was cancelled due to the attack in New York City and at the Pentagon. Photo by: Laura Horner

Faculty and staff members gather in the Wigwam to watch as President Bush addresses the nation from Offutt Air Force Base in Nebraska. Throughout the day, faculty, staff and students joined around televisions across campus to watch the latest news on the attack. ASU administration held an emergency meeting on Tuesday morning to discuss closing campus for the day, but chose to keep things as normal possible. Photo by: Shaila Creekmore

*Always in our minds
Always in our hearts*

On that fateful morning, passengers on four planes did not know that they were not going to live through the day. That morning, American Airlines flight 11, a Boeing 767 departing from Boston, abruptly turned and headed toward New York City after terrorist took control of the plane. At 8:45 a.m. the plane smashed into the first tower of the World Trade Center. Eighteen minutes later, United Airlines flight 175 hit the second tower of the World Trade Center. Soon there after, the Pentagon was targeted by American flight 77. At 10 a.m. United flight 93 crashed 80 miles southeast of Pittsburgh, Penn., crashing short of its target when passengers overtook hijackers. At about the same time, back in New York, tower number two collapsed, twenty minutes later tower number one collapsed. Any red-blooded American, no matter what their race, would be proud of our fellow citizens response. At the Red Cross, there were three to four hour waits to give blood. Financial donations reached almost one billion dollars just one month later. Patriotism was around every corner, flags and ribbons hung on anything they could be tied to. Americans proudly said, "Justice and freedom will prevail."

Always in our hearts*

Clang! Clang! The Anvil rang.
On Bloody Tuesday, the Hammer sang.
Flying forges of terror and pain,
Living souls that fell like rain,
Great pride also fell and great power.
No more, no more the awesome Towers.
And shining symbol of military might
Scarred by smoke of darkest night.

Clang! Clang!

The Anvil rang.

On Bloody Tuesday,

the Hammers sang.

With fire and ash

and blood so red,

Yet metal

gleamed through the awful dead.

A Sword cracked

by battles past

In crimson blaze,

how could it last?

Would it melt

away and shine no longer

Or be reforged more dreadful, stronger?

Cars line up outside the Wal-Mart gas station. People across the country raced to fuel their cars as fears increased that gas would be shut off due to an impending war. Some waits reached in the upwards of two hours and prices were as high as $2 per gallon across the state. Photo by: Laura Horner

Televisions across campus constantly air the latest news. All network and news channels, as well as most cable and radio stations, went to 24-hour news coverage, some for more than a week. News stations all over the world replayed the two planes hitting the towers over and over. Photo by: Richard Penn

A sign hangs on the chain-link fence surrounding the Student Union construction. The facility was to contain three floors and the services housed in the current building. Photo by: Shaila Creekmore

A drill rig sits on the Reng Student Services Center construction site waiting to be put to work. The new center was to house a dining hall, food court, convenience store, study lounges, computer lab, auditorium, fitness/wellness center, study lounges and more. Photo by: Vikki Jones

Construction crews work in the middle of what used to be Aggie Road. The road, which ran through the center of campus, was permanently closed to make way for the construction. The current facility was scheduled to be renovated once work was complete on the new building. The entire project was expected to be completed in the spring of 2005. Photo by: Vikki Jones

Saunders convinces Max, an opera singer "want-to-be," to impersonate the Italian great in the evening's performance. In full costume, from heavy make-up to a wig, the deception is nearly pulled off, until Tito awakes from his deep sleep ready for the stage! "Lend Me a Tenor" opened on Wednesday, Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m. and ran through Saturday, Nov. 17 in the Black Box Theatre. The ASU production was student led. Leading the team was Michael Miles as stage director. Photo by: Vikki Jones

Maggie, Saunders' daughter, daydreams of the moment she gets to meet Tito Merelli. Brittany Hillyer, a junior theatre major from Jonesboro, played Maggie. "Lend Me a Tenor" gave the audience a wild ride ranging from mistaken identity, desperate measures, plain comedy, as well as compromising positions set in the delightful period of the 1930's. As seen here, patriotism has taken every shape and size. Even baby diaper companies have slapped a flag on newborns to 3-year-olds' bottoms. One Nation

Forever We Will Stand

Shadows of the past are still apparent. Thousands of military men and women have moved around the world to protect us from our enemies, men running and hiding in caves. While President Bush issued monetary rewards for a list of terrorist, air strikes continued over Afganistan for several months, flushing out the Taliban. While the war began across the world, Americans began to go on with their lives while still being aware that nothing was the same. Not a day goes by without some remembrance of the attack on Sept. 11. Should it not be that way? One of the greatest crimes against man was committed during our generation. Our parents remember the day that

J F K was assassinated, so should we not remember where we were when those four planes hit. It is a sad fact that thousands of people had to die to finally bring us into onenation. Will it stay this way?

We can only hope.....then wait. We Americans are known for our determination and perserverance. We will stay one nation and our patriotism can only flourish. Life does go on as it always has and always will. By: Joshua Toopes

From Pearl Harbor to the attack on 9-11, one of the first things done was the raising of an American flag and a moment of silence. There will always be a moment of silence in every Americans' heart. Photo by: Shaila Creekmore

Academics

While you may have stopped growing physically, your mind still has lots of growing and advancing to do. We read chapter after chapter, took test after test, wrote and rewrote papers, all to help us accelerate the learning process. Students worked each day, in and out of the classroom to learn new information, to perfect their skills, and to learn what it would take to put their knowledge to the test in "the real world."

A Glimpse Into the Future

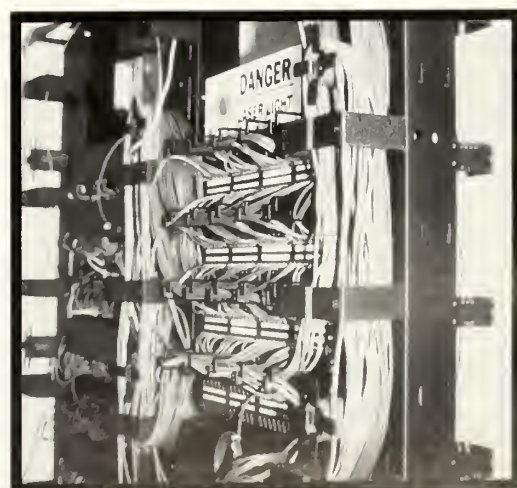

Now leveled, the once Computer Services building housed all of ASU's computer information and hardware. At the beginning of the 2001 fall semester, workers were already moving the computer equipment across campus. At the end of the fall semester, the demolition of the building had begun. Photo by: Vikki Jones

ASU recently signed an enterprise software agreement with Microsoft Corporation which allows ASU students, staff and faculty to get software such as Microsoft Office 98, 2000, and 2001 free of charge. Media requests and distributions began on Monday, Sept. 10. It was also offered online for faculty personal use. Photo by: Shaila Creekmore

Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges

99 students selected to become a member of Who's Who are recognized at banquet

A crowded ballroom full of spectators awaited eagerly for the name of their friend or family member to be announced at the Who's Who banquet. All undergraduate students with 60 or more credit hours and a g.p.a. of 2.5 or higher were eligible to apply. Graduate students with 12 completed hours and a g.p.a. of 3.5 or higher were also eligible to apply. Photo by: Elise Throgmorton

President Les Wyatt gives the closing remarks at the banquet. The banquet was held on Nov. 26 to honor the recipients. Students were recognized by the deans of their respective colleges during the ceremony. Photo by: Elise Throgmorton

Ashley S. Whitmore of St. Charles was chosen as the Outstanding Who's Who recipient. Whitmore was a senior exercise science major. Some of her academic achievements were: ASU President's List, National Society of Collegiate Scholars, United States Achievement Academy All-American Scholar and ASU Presidential Scholarship. She was an active member of Phi Eta Sigma, Alpha Lambda Delta and Physical Therapy Student Association. She was also involved in several civic activities.

Greeks

For many, the best part of college life were the friends that were made. Friends foster in us things that can never be learned in a classroom, including how to work together, how to communicate, and how to express yourself. Greek organizations gave students the opportunity to join a group with their similar interest, yet be themselves. Fraternities and sororities also gave students a chance to give back to the community through service projects.

During the week of August 23rd-August 27th, more than 200 potential new members visited each sororities suite.

*G*irls Recruitment 2001

Delta Zeta's Sara Hines, Jennifer Heuer, and Elizabeth Taylor perform a skit based on the popular 70's show Charlie's Angels. The purpose of skit night was to let potential new members relax with some entertainment from members while they learned more about each sorority. Photo by: Jessica Spooner

After a long night of rush, the members of Alpha Omicron Pi still manage to put on a smile. More than 200 potential new members walked through each suite the first night of rush. The AOPI's informed the potential new members of arthritis research, one of their philanthropy projects, by helping them make stress balls. Photo by: Jessica Spooner

The 12 Rho Chi's kickoff recruitment with a humorous skit to lighten things up. These girls disaffiliated themselves from their sororities and devoted their time to helping each girl learn about Greek life. The Rho-Chi's served as counselors to the rushees as they went through the strenuous but exciting recruitment process. Photo by: Jessica Spooner

The Chi Omega pledge class of 2001 has their picture made as part of Bid Day. After taking pictures, the returning Chi Omega members and new members went on a video scavenger hunt to get better acquainted with each other. Photo by: Amy Wheat

Potential new members meet for an orientation and are informed of the events that are to take place each day during recruitment. Each girl went through a series of events during the week that informed her of what each sorority had to offer. Every day featured a different theme, allowing the girls to see the individual personalities of every sorority. Photo by: Jessica Spooner

Lauren McMorries, a junior health promotion major from Jonesboro, and sophomore Brian Smiley of Jonesboro participate in Greek 101 by leading discussion, playing games, and most of all trying to make members feel welcome. This program was designed to help new members understand what being Greek is all about. Photo by: April Colbert

New members go outside to listen to their Greek 101 facilitators as they work on Greek participation. Greek 101 was an annual event sponsored by the NPC and IFC. Andrea Schmidt, a new member of Chi Omega who attended the event said, "This was a great opportunity to come together with other Greeks and forget about what separates us, but focus rather on what joins us." Photo by: April Colbert

New members and Greek 101 facilitators participate in a small group discussion. The new members were divided up and put into groups with a male and female facilitator. In these groups they learned more about Greek unity as they got acquainted with other new Greeks. Photo by: April Colbert

Speaker Carl Johnson, from the University of Denver speaks to new members about unity, finding a purpose, accountability and responsibility. Greek 101 was the first chance for all 2001 pledge classes to come together at an event. All new members were required to attend. Photo by: April Colbert

April Mann, Assistant Dean of Students, welcomes fraternity and sorority members to the annual Greek 101. There were about 375 new members present. Mann worked closely with fraternity and sorority members to make this event possible. Photo by: April Colbert

More than 100 potential new members visited each of the fraternity houses during the week of formal recruitment.

*G*uys Recruitment 2001

The brothers of the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity exemplify their unity and brotherhood by doing their "yell" at the end of a formal recruitment meeting. Potential new members watched from behind anxiously awaiting bid day and the opportunity to join a brotherhood that they could call their own. Photo by: Jessica Spooner

During the week of rush, members of Sigma Phi Epsilon keep their doors open to potential new members who may want to stop by and participate in a game of volleyball. Sig Ep's had the largest pledge class on campus after recruitment 2001.

Kyle Kieth gives a presentation to a group of eager rushees. At this point, potential new members were told more in depth information about being a part of Lambda Chi Alpha. In addition to brotherhood, philanthropy, intramurals, and campus involvement were the basis of Greek life. More than a hundred men participated in rush week.

Some of the best times during rush are simply "hanging out" as members of Alpha Tau Omega show as they create a casual atmosphere by lounging on their sectional couch. The members of ATO wanted every rushee to see their brotherhood in an everyday atmosphere. Recruitment was held August 23-27. Photo by: Jessica Spooner

The Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, along with their sweetheart, recruit new members by inviting those interested to their house for a formal meeting. The brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha wanted to inform potential members of what campus activities and philanthropies their fraternity participated in. Photo by: Jessica Spooner

Scott Gairhan from Trumann, a member of Pi Kappa Alpha, leads the IFC meeting at the ATO house. Members of IFC were the governing board for the nine fraternities on campus. They conducted bi-weekly meetings throughout the year to regulate Greek life on campus and to talk about upcoming events. Photo by: Jessica Spooner

Each semester ASPHC organizations hold informational meetings. These meetings were advertised on campus with flyers and chalkings on the ground. The meetings allowed potential new members to meet members and decide if being a member of the governing council was right for them. Photo by Shawn Brown

Members of the National Panhellenic Council meet on a regular basis to discuss issues involving Greek life on ASU's campus. The meetings were held in a different sorority suite each time. The meetings were held to promote Greek unity between sororities and to find ways to make Greek life more beneficial. Photo by: Jessica Spooner

Sports

ASU athletes flourished in their sports as they took the field, court or track during the year. They were able to fine tune their talent while learning from experienced coaches and seasoned players. Participation in college sports taught athletes how to be disciplined as they practiced and trained. Student athletes had the added task of balancing games and practice with school, work and extra curricular activities.

Running the Long Race

Members of the cross country girls team pray for a victory before competing. They pray for motivation, strength and will-power for the long race. Cross country requires runners to stay focused and prepared. It has been said that a team that pray's together stays together. Photo by: Vikki Jones

Baseball Gets Ready for Big Season

Tomlinson Stadium has been the home of Arkansas State baseball since 1993. Lights were added to the stadium three years later. It seats over 1,000 people. During the 2001 season the team was 13-16 at Tomlinson, 9-16 away from home, and 0-4 at neutral sites. Photo by: Shaila Creekmore

Batter Zach Shipley and catcher Andy Runyan both await the pitch. Both joined the team in the spring semester. Shipley signed with the Tribe during the summer, and Runyan came from the University of Missouri. Overall, the Indians have 25 newcomers to go along with the 13 returning players. ASU welcomes new coach, AD

Athletic Director Paul Griffin prepares to introduce Steve Roberts as the new head football coach at ASU. Griffin was named as the school's new A.D. in December 2001. His first task in his new job was to hire Roberts as the new coach. Griffin also served as A.D. for Jacksonville University, Roanoke College, and the University of South Florida. USF fielded a football team for the first time under Griffin. Photo by: Vikki Jones

Paul Griffin waits to speak at the press conference alongside Gina Bowman, assistant director of athletics and sports information director. Griffin came to ASU from Georgia Tech where he was a special consultant to their athletic director. Photo by: Vikki Jones

President Les Wyatt speaks at the press conference to announce the hiring of a new football coach. The press conference was held in the Fowler Center on Dec. 21. Wyatt became president of ASU in 1995. In the past, Wyatt served as president of the Sun Belt Conference. Photo by: Vikki Jones

Steve Roberts is the 26th head football coach at Arkansas State University. Roberts takes over for Joe Hollis who was fired at the end of the 2001 season after compiling a record of 13-43 in five years. Roberts, a Little Rock native, was head coach at South Arkansas University in Magnolia from 1994 to 1999. Photo by: Vikki Jones

Coach Roberts receives applause from the crowd at the press conference in the Fowler Center. Prior to landing the Indian head coaching job, Roberts spent the previous two seasons at Northwestern State University in Natchitoches, La., where he led them to a 6-5 record in 2000, and 8-4 in 2001. Quotes

"I consider it a privilege to be named the director of athletics at Arkansas State during this critical time in the University's athletic history. The athletic program has a lot of promise and a bright future at Arkansas State, and I look forward to being a part of its continued growth."

Athletic Director Paul Griffin

"Paul Griffin has the level of expertise we want at Arkansas State University. He has been successful as a director of athletics at three institutions and brings with him the wealth of experience we need. In particular, we were impressed with his record in developing a Division 1-A program at the University of South Florida, and his leadership in forming Conference USA."

President Les Wyatt

"I am very excited about the opportunity to be at Arkansas State. I am looking forward to working with Paul Griffin and the people at ASU and hoping to fulfill the vision we all share to help the football program to grow, not only on and off the field, but in the classroom."

Head Football Coach
Steve Roberts

"We are very proud to have Steve Roberts as the head football coach at Arkansas State. We want to identify an individual with integrity, great character, and the energy and head-coaching experience to take a football program and turn it into a successful one. Steve Roberts has these credentials. Also, equally important, Steve knows Arkansas. He went to school and coached in the state of Arkansas. His family lives in Arkansas and he is known in the state's sports community. He is a good fit for our university and our community."

Athletic Director Paul Griffin

Rucks and Scrums

The women's rugby team huddles up before a game. Unity was one of the main themes for this year's team. "As the season progressed, the team played better because we became closer as a squad," said Vikki Jones. Photo courtesy of: Vikki Jones

An ASU player tackles one of U of A's players as she lets go of the ball. Actually, that's a U of A player playing for ASU. For this game, the women's rugby team was forced to borrow a player from the U of A because they were short-handed. Photo by: Vikki Jones.

Quotes

"After dropping the first game to the University of Arkansas, the following week ASU women's rugby club played in the Octoberfest rugby tournament in Memphis, Tenn., scoring their first point ever against Southern Illinois University, and winning their first match the following day against Ox Valley, of Chicago. The ASU women's rugby club also attended the Ozark Invitational Tournament in North Little Rock, where they were beaten in the first round by nationally ranked Kansas State, but came back to play tough matches against the University of Missouri and Truman State University.

As the coach, I see our team making tremendous strides. Club sports make a positive contribution to the overall college experience. Players learn discipline, teamwork, and responsibility. Club sports are often more rewarding for players because the level they are able to achieve is determined by the effort they exert, where in major sports, winning is often dependent on pure athletic ability."

Joe Barrett

ASU goes head-to-head with Fayetteville players in a scrum. One of the ways rugby differed from football was that each team had only eight players on the field at a time, whereas in football it's 11-on-11. Photo courtesy of: Vikki Jones.

Womens Rugby Continuees to Grow

The two teams line up and get in proper formation as they prepare to scrum. There was a certain way they had to line up before the scrum could take place. Photo courtesy of: Vikki Jones

Now the rugby players actually scrum. Coach Barrett, who was a volunteer, said he saw his team "making tremendous strides." Before Barrett, some of the guys from the men's rugby team would help out with the women's team, but none were recognized as an official coach. Photo courtesy of: Vikki Jones

The Players

"We've come a long way from having four people chartering the club to having a full side going to away games."

Vikki Jones
Junior

"Playing on the women's rugby club is like being part of a family. I've made so many close friends."

Tanya Jones
Freshman

"Rugby is a great and enjoyable experience."

Elisha Wright
Senior

"I never met girls like these my whole life. I've made the best of friends by being on the team."

Heather Goodman

Katie Zupan runs with the ball with an Arkansas player hot on her trail. As you can tell from the picture, the shape of the ball was very similar to that of a football. In rugby, however, players were only allowed to pass the ball backward, they cannot throw it forward. Photo courtesy of: Vikki Jones.

People

As 10,000 students entered Arkansas State, a few began to blossom as exceptional students. Some found they were really talented artist, others found they were good in math, yet others discovered what they came to ASU for was not their life-long career choice. College is not only about learning from a text book, but it's about learning about yourself and who you are as an individual.

The Board of Trustees and President Wyatt meet in the library board room in May 2001. The members were appointed by the governor for three-year-terms.

President Les Wyatt:

Q: Is there anything you would like to say to students?

A: "I'm really proud of our students at Arkansas State. I say that anytime I have a chance. We have good students who are here. They have come to a university that is better than they think it is. We compare very favorably to any other university in the state or even the region for that matter. Most students realize that once they (graduate) and realize they are fully competitive with graduates from any other university. We here from our successor institutions...how well trained they are."

Q: Women's soccer was recently added to the ASU intercollegiate sports schedule. Do you plan to add any more women's sports that are NCAA approved?

A: "We need to provide additional opportunities for women to participate in intercollegiate sports. The next program we plan on adding . . . is women's softball program. Both of which, soccer and softball, are included in our conference, championship, sports list."

Q: After the new computer building is complete and the offices have moved into the new location, what will become of the former locations?

A: "There are three actually where we have computers. (The pink, metal building near the library) will be torn down next spring. It was never designed to be a building to last this long. That area is going to be developed into kind of an amphitheatre. There is a second building where we have telecommunications and computer services. That building will be reassigned. The administrative computer will also move to the new space."

Q: Many programs, clubs and organizations on campus do not have much active participation due to lack of knowledge. How do you plan to solve this problem to raise awareness of all the areas of interests that ASU has to offer to students?

Q: Are there still plans to build a research facility on campus using the tobacco lawsuit money? If so, where and when will it be built?

A: "The project will start this next spring. It will be located across the street from the Agricultural Lab Sciences building on South Caraway."

Q: What are the current plans for constructing an overpass at the railroad tracks on Caraway Road?

A: "It won't be on Caraway Road. It will connect the street in front of the Armory to the intersection of Washington and Matthews. It will be on the west side of campus. When it is built, we plan to close Caraway Road where it comes over the railroad tracks for safety purposes."

Q: As you know, the raise in tuition upset many students. How has this increase been justified and what are they getting for their money?

A: "This is a difficult concept to except, but it is one we need to realize none the less. Because tuition is raised does not mean that we necessarily buy new things. Sometimes we have to raise tuition because costs have increased. We've had to increase tuition because costs of operating the university have gone up. We've had a great increase of paying for utilities on campus. It's something that we take for granted, (but) the cost for providing those services had a great increase. What we have to do is find a way to pay for those things and in many cases we have to pass those costs along to the people who use them, in this case the students."

Q: "I wish we had a way to make students aware of the large range available. A lot of times students are unaware and don't know how to find out the range of activities we have here. We hope to eventually use the power of the Internet to list activities, description about it, and who to contact to find out more about it."

to send out new growth

As the year closed, we had grown in many ways. The campus continued to grow and change; as buildings went up, others came down. Hundreds of recent graduates left to face the "real world." Many students found their husband or wife, changed their major or learned things they would carry with them to their first job out of college. All of us learned what it meant to be an American as we saw heroes work endless hours to save strangers and soldiers march off to war to save us all.

Colophon

The 79th edition of the Arkansas State University Indian was printed by Jostens Printing and Publishing Company, 4000 S. Adams, Topeka, Kansas 66601. Mary Nell Sparks and Natasha Cole were the company sales representatives and Judy Huffaker was the inplant customer service representative.

Photographs were taken by staff photographers, ASU Sports Information, News and Information Services, and other freelance contributors. Photos were processed at Midsouth Photographic Specialties, 2502 Glenwood Drive, Jonesboro. Digital class portraits were taken by Child Art Studio in Paragould. All group photos were taken by staff photographers or were courtesy of the organizations.

The press run for the 2002 Indian was 5,000 copies. Glossy 80# paper stock was used. The cover was designed by the 2002 staff and Jostens Creative Services. The cover was Green 516 with Spanish grain and art in Silver Foil 381.

Caption copy was 8-point Palatino normal. Headlines were Biffo MT normal set in various point sizes. All elements were typeset using the Apple Macintosh Publishing System.
